

Statement Regarding COVID-19

For immediate release
Friday, 20 March 2020

As a digital hub for the Southeast Queensland arts sector, it has always been Theatre Haus' mission to bring its community together, through the connection of live performances and opportunities.

In light of recent events and decisions set forth by the Federal Government to ban all indoor public gatherings over 100 people, our Haus Mates have decided to suspend and cease all Theatre Haus reviewing services. As of Saturday, 21 March 2020 and until advised, our reviewers and writers will no longer be attending any of our neighbours' live performances.

This move does not mean we don't support the arts (or want to see your show for that matter), however, the company has a duty of care to those who occupy and work at Theatre Haus. We feel that it is a disservice to those who volunteer their time to be put in situations that may go against the advice of government and healthcare professionals.

We have watched our community close their theatre doors and our team feels this loss alongside the rest of the heartbroken industry. Unfortunately, we now feel we must follow the same path for the time being. As more information comes to light, we will continue to update our followers and partners. We appreciate your patience during this complicated time.

Theatre Haus prides itself on providing a free digital platform to all artists in Southeast Queensland, across the professional, independent and community sectors. While our team refrains from attending live performances, we will continue to keep you up to date through our news, editorial, event and audition listings platforms at the discretion of the team.

We encourage our neighbours to share their stories to our email inbox, hello@theatrehaus.com, as we do plan to showcase the wonderful community that is alive and present in our state.

For now, our team will be accessible digitally and will remain indoors at our Haus.

Thank you to all our neighbours and friends who continue to keep our house filled with support, passion, and theatre! Stay safe!

The Haus Mates,

Elodie Boal, Trent Sellars, Sophie Price and Louella Baldwin
